LANDSLIDE IN PARK CREATES PROBLEM

Situation Follows Efforts of Zoo Officials to Add to Parking Space.

Soil erosion—a relatively unheard-of menace in Washington—has developed in Rock Creek Park due to efforts of Zoo officials to create additional automobile parking space for the public.

Although the problem is concentrated at present in a comparatively small area, it may be difficult to deal with, according to Agriculture Department soil erosion experts.

As a result of a landslide of several hundred tons of earth opposite the elephant house, Rock Creek has been half blocked, thus setting the stage for a possible flood in the valley in the event of heavy rains.

The section affected is just downstream of the Kingle Road Bridge that spans the creek. At the orders of Zoo officials, truckloads of earth were recently dumped there to lay the foundation for a new parking space.

Trees Are Felled.
Apparently weakened by recent rains, the pile of earth sheared off and catapulted into the valley, taking with it several sizable trees on the hillside.

Agriculture Department authorities say that because the trees, which anchored the earth to the slope, have been swept away, difficulty will now be experienced in preventing erosion. The swath cut down the hillside is around 50 feet in width and extends the entire distance from the rim of the valley to the creek.

While officials of the National Capital Parks have made no official protest, some foresee possibilities of flood danger upstream, because of the narrowed channel of Rock Creek, in the event of high water.

Dr. Mann may seek a Works Progress Administration project at the site of the slide, so as to cope with the erosion problem. Another possibility is that the Civilian Conservation Corps may be asked to set up a camp there to deal with it.

Survey Is Conducted.
Meanwhile, because of the increase in interest on the part of the motoring public in the new animals that Dr. Mann brought from the Orient last year, the Keystone Automobile Club has conducted a preliminary survey in conjunction with Zoo officials and William S. Canning, engineering director of the club.

Dr. Mann says that parking space can be at least doubled. Dr. E. P. Walker, assistant director of the Zoo, just completed a survey with Mr. Canning, who believes 900 additional cars can be parked in 16 acres he believes can be converted into new parking areas.

The Keystone Club says that areas suggested for the new parking network include unused space in front of the bear dens near the Harvard street entrance, 171 cars; back of the pelican pond and across the creek toward Adams Mill road (with access over a new bridge), 300 cars; at the foot of the easterly slope of the lion house hill, 125 cars; at the foot of west slope of hill, 83 cars; along baseball field, 84 cars; opposite ball field and along creek, 180 cars; on point of land near wolf dens, 68 cars; near monkey house, 107 cars; north of yak range, 93 cars, with possibly 260 more through drainage of present unoccupied marshy terrain; east of new elephant house, 150 cars and north of wild horses, 258 cars.

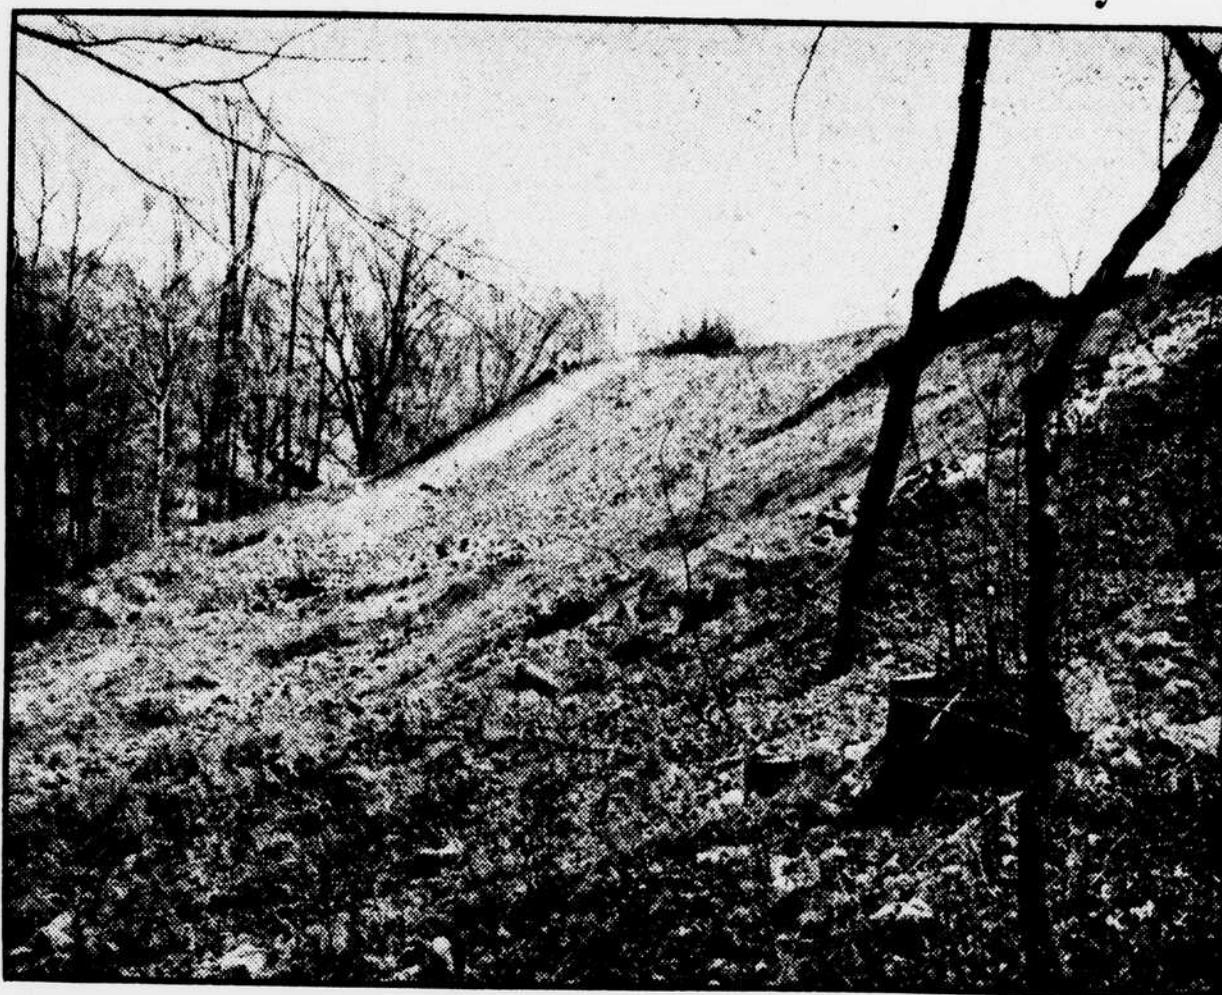

TRAIN IS WRECKED

Several Women Reported Hurt in Nevada Accident.

LAS VEGAS, Nev., April 14 (AP).—Six cars of the Union Pacific Challenger overturned early today when the passenger train, eastbound from Los Angeles, struck a broken rail in the desert 43 miles south of Las Vegas. First reports said no one was seriously injured, but all available ambulances were rushed to the scene from here.

Three Pullmans, a lounge car and two dining cars were off the track and toppled on their side, but the locomotive remained upright, the Union Pacific reported.

Because of the early hour, the lounge and diners were believed to have been empty. Several women were reported hurt in a Pullman dressing room.

Soil Erosion Threatens Park Beauty

A view of the landslide which sheared off a number of trees and has created a soil-erosion problem in Rock Creek Park. It started when an attempt was made to enlarge automobile parking space at the Zoo.

Pan-American

American day celebration here was a broadcast arranged at 3 p.m. today by women associated with the people's mandate for the ratification of the inter-American peace treaty drawn up at the Buenos Aires Conference in 1936.

Text of Address.

The text of President Roosevelt's address follows:
There could be no more fitting occasion than the present for me to greet my friends of the 20 other American republics. We have learned in this Western Hemisphere what community of interest really means. We have worked for it, created it and we now glory in it. Properly, therefore, Pan-American Day is set aside as an annual testimony to the significance which the American family of nations has for the world.

Never was that significance greater than today. The 21 American republics present proudly to the rest of the world a demonstration that the rule of justice and law can be substituted for the rule of force; that resort to war as an instrument of policy is not necessary; that international differences of all kinds can be solved through peaceful negotiation; that the sanctity of the pledged word faithfully observed and generously interpreted offers a system of security with freedom. The three hundred millions of citizens in the American republics are not different from other human beings. We have the same problems, the same differences, even the same material for controversy which exists elsewhere. Yet, we have undertaken contractual obligations to solve these normal human differences by maintaining peace; and that peace we are firmly resolved to maintain. It shall not be endangered by controversies within our family; and we will not permit it to be endangered from aggression coming from outside of our hemisphere.

Heavy Responsibility.

The American peoples, who today fortunately live as good neighbors, not only enjoy a privilege, but undertake a heavy responsibility. Fortunate in being remote from the tumult of conflicting doctrines and from the horrors of armed conflict—from the tragedies whose shadows lie heavy on the world, the American republics, nevertheless, face a grave test. If our good fortune is to continue, our will must be strong.

All of us gained independence because our fathers were willing to sacrifice their lives and all they possessed for a great ideal. Some part of that duty to sacrifice rests also on us. We have progressed far along the path that leads to government by the people in the interest of all the people. Our Democratic system has conferred on all of us an inestimable gift of individual liberty within the law. We are vitally concerned with preserving the high standards of international restraint and morality, which the lesson of centuries has taught is the first requirement of peaceful relationships between nations.

Now, more than ever before, we of this American Hemisphere must make plain that these principles, upon which so great a civilization is founded, are vibrant, productive and dynamic. National and international law and morality are not the restraints of weakness; they are signs of serene strength—confidence in our purpose and ability to maintain independence and democracy.

New Opportunity at Lima.

Particularly I am glad that in December of this present year repreprogress in communications. The North, Central and South American voices which reach us through the air are those of friends. Only a short time ago the people of the United States were enabled to hear a gracious message broadcast to them by my friend the President of Argentina. A few days later they listened to the address delivered to them by the minister of foreign affairs of Brazil, whom we had been privileged to have in Washington as Brazil's Ambassador during the past three years. His significant words were applauded in every American home.

Our ideal is democratic liberty. Our instrument is honor and friendship. Our method is increased understanding. Our basis is confidence. So and not otherwise, in common effort we safeguard in this new world the great rights of our liberties and build our civilization for the advancement of humanity throughout the world.

Confusing Names.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP).—Before the election Miss Nellie Galvin, city hall switchboard operator, had occasional difficulty in distinguishing whether the party wanted "Mr. Lyon" or "Mr. Ryan," both of whom were employees.

The election didn't solve her problem. Now she has "Mr. Flick" and "Mr. Glick."
